

I am concerned at the amount of violence and use of profanity on television and the effects it will have on my children and grand children. Being profane is not a "freedom", its just profane. I wonder if you all encourage your own children and grand children to "experience" all the freedoms you allow on tv. Do you think that all the sex, violence, and cussing makes our children better citizens and more well rounded people? I think it just sets a standard for them to be more sexual, violent, and vulgar people because you guys are setting a "normal" standard. I have never understood what is so bad about morality. I have resorted to renting and buying movies to protect my family from the "free speech" and political agendas. I am asking as a concerned mother of 3 and a grandmother of 1 that you consider morality and children more important than foul language, sex, and violence.

Sincerely,

Renee Wilson
